This newsletter is for readers

- who believe that excellent health and wealth is for everyone,
- who are seeking for neutral and critical information regarding health, nutrition, lifestyle and environment,
- who are concerned about the ongoing environmental destruction and our children's future.

Dear Friends,

The feedback for the 1st Newsletter was very positive! Many thanks, this encourages us to continue in this reader-friendly informative style.

In this issue we write about Vibrational Healing and its powerful effects on humans, animals and plants. More and more people begin to realize that we are multidimensional spiritual beings of light and very sensitive to subtle healing energies. Vibrational healing methods work by rebalancing disturbances of structure and energy flow within our mind/body/spiritual dimensions.

We write also about Family Constellations as a highly effective tool to understand and change behaviour patterns taken on from our parents and grandparents, which hold us back from achieving the happiness and success we deserve.

A new scientific report reveals new insights about the possible causes of breast cancer.

This week the German journal Spiegel published an article about Japan's current handling of whale meat. Because of oversupply the Japanese are storing 4800 tons of whale meat in cold rooms. They are now considering to process excess whale meat to dog-food! Read on Page 2 how you can exert influence as a consumer.

Lots of Love and Harmony,

Vibrational Healing - The New Frontier in Alternative Medicine - Part I

By Bojan Schianetz

Vibrational healing is the ancient and modern way of healing. During the last 25 years there have been many interesting developments in the field of Vibrational Healing. There is no doubt, thousands of scientific abstracts document the healing effects of Vibrational Healing worldwide.

As energy beings we are highly susceptible to energies. Each cell, organ, emotion or thought creates a separate vibration in the human body; each colour or sound carries its own vibration. Quantum physics and experiments in high-energy particle physics have shown that, at the particle level, all matter is really energy. Even allopathic medicine is starting to admit that energy or vibrations are affecting us, and that it can be used for healing purposes. Vibrational healing attempts to treat people with pure energy, without the use of drugs or physical manipulations of the body.

Love's hidden orders - Carrying burdens of our family

By Karin Maria Schianetz

Can the love for our family make us sick and hold us back in our lives? How come that children seldom dare to live a happier and more fulfilling life than their parents? How come that we often repeat certain behaviour patterns of our parents and grandparents that keep us stuck in our relationships and our life, make us sick, and prevent success?

One of the most respected family therapists in the world today, Bert Hellinger, has cast light on these questions by illuminating the hidden loyalties and orders within family systems. He and his many successors observed over the last 25 years of the development of the systemic psychotherapy that out of love, we unconsciously reproduce the life of one of our suffering or forgotten family members. We do not fully live our own lives, but in part, someone else's. Just like any other system, the family system has its own order and when that order is disrupted, the effects are felt by subsequent generations as the system tries to right itself. There appear to be certain natural laws operating to maintain that order and permit the free flow of love between family members.

Systemic therapists uncover these hidden family structures in a workshop that Bert Hellinger has called the family constellation workshop. In these workshops we literally see the dynamics and enmeshments that we are holding inside and that we are unconsciously following. Seeing and accepting the system as it is, is the beginning of shifting the perspective and energy field of the system. This "movement of the soul" often initiates the healing of long-lasting depressions, anxieties, blockages, and the resulting physical diseases. The constellation is done only once for a particular family member or problem and then a healing movement can start operating.

Recent development has also brought systemic constellation workshops into the realm of the business world in the form of "organisational constellations". The systemic therapy basing on constellation work is the most rapidly expanding form of family therapy in Germany, and is found in more than 25 countries worldwide.

Whaling: Tell them it's bad for their business

Whale hunters profit from fish sold in your local supermarket. Sealord, a seafood company, makes millions of dollars selling tinned, frozen and fresh fish in Australian supermarkets and fast food restaurants. Nissui is a major shareholder of the company and directly linked to Japanese whaling. Nissui also markets and sells whale meat throughout Japan. Help to finish the needless slaughter of whales by participating on this petition: Please visit <http://www.greenpeace.org.au/petition/whale-petition.html>. Greenpeace will pass your petition on to Sealord, so they know how concerned Australians are about the needless slaughter of whales.

You see here a whale shark with a diver. There is no need to search for signs of life in the universe until we understand and respect the amazing water world of our planet.

It is a process whereby vibrations are introduced or transferred into our physical and energetic bodies. Vibrational healing is based on the belief that all illness is a result of an imbalance that originates on deep mental and emotional planes and upon the homeopathy concept of “like cures like”. In contrast to the orthodox medical world, the approach of vibrational healing is to neutralize these imbalances and to strengthen the immune system at the same time. As a result, the health problem usually dissolves at a deep and complete level.

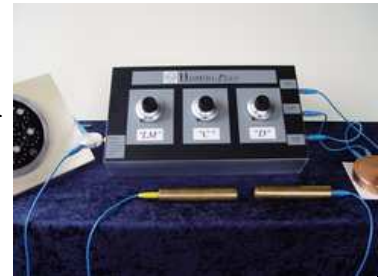

Vibrational Healing has a long tradition

Among the different disciplines in Vibrational Healing the Chinese Qi Healing has one of the longest histories and encompasses the most time-tested personal training methods by which the healer can systematically increase the sensitivity and power of treatment. Homeopathy developed by Dr. Samuel Hahnemann in the eighteenth century is probably the best known and most discussed Vibrational Healing technique in the western world. But there are many more techniques to mention, such as Reiki, Electromagnetic Healing Devices, Crystal Therapy, Light and Sound Therapies, natural plant essences like Love Remedies or Bach Remedies and Aromatherapy.

New approaches for Vibrational Healing

During the last 25 years a number of new meridian/acupoint-based electronic systems and Radionic systems have been developed and applied in England and Germany. These devices are based upon the Biological Resonance and the Holographic Principle. I came in contact with the first devices in 1990 in Germany. As an orthodox thinking civil engineer I thought at fist “this is nonsense”. But very soon I started to change my mind, seeing the extreme positive effects on treated patients, animals and plants. Then I started to work with a Bio-Energy emitter and started to realize that I am dealing with a new physical, biological, medical and spiritual science. Beside my normal work I started to conduct numerous experiments, with very interesting results. It worked extremely well with all types of pain; for example head ache or menstrual pain disappeared sometimes in minutes. Sometimes the healing process occurred on an extremely subtle way. So subtle that some patients even forgot about their problems. And it worked also with patients who didn't believe at all in these devices. But after days they had to admit that something changed. It was nice to see how gentle and subtle these changes homeopathy, that scares so many patients. The range of applications is almost endless and even treatments through distance are very effective. Meanwhile there are thousands of users worldwide, especially in Germany, England and USA. In the next Newsletter edition I will explain a bit more about the proceeding and different applications.

Report Finds Half of Breast Cancer Causes May Be Environmental

By Valeria Astorga, PhD

Breast cancer rates have been climbing steadily in the United States and other industrialized countries since the 1940s, amounting to more than one million cases per year worldwide.

“State of the Evidence 2006: What Is the Connection Between the Environment and Breast Cancer?” reports that as many as 50 percent of breast cancer cases remain unexplained by either genetics or lifestyle factors. Instead, the report says, “compelling scientific evidence points to some of the 100,000 synthetic chemicals in use today as contributing to the development of breast cancer, either by altering hormone function or gene expression.” The report also identifies radiation exposure, such as that from X-rays and CT scans, as the “longest-established environmental cause of breast cancer.”

“State of the Evidence 2006,” reviews and analyses nearly 350 scientific studies on environmental links to breast cancer. The report was peer-reviewed by leading scientists at the University of Pittsburgh Cancer Institute, Tufts University School of Medicine, and other research institutions.

Among the research findings reported in the 2006 edition:

- Genetic susceptibility makes only a “small to moderate contribution” to the incidence of breast cancer, according to a re-analysis of a large Scandinavian study originally published in 2000;
- An interdisciplinary analysis of the history of hormone replacement therapy revealed that scientists were aware of its breast cancer risk as early as the 1930s.
- Researchers working in Iowa and North Carolina found an increased risk of breast cancer among the wives of farmers who used certain chlorinated pesticides and among those living closest to areas of pesticide application.
- There is no safe dose of ionizing radiation. Even the smallest dose has the potential to cause an increased cancer risk in humans, according to a report from the National Research Council; and

The new report offers a 10-point plan to reduce the risk of breast cancer.
